I DID THIS.
ok, here is where i am puzzled...you spend all this time, following me around (indiana, australia, england), writing press releases, trying to get pre-pub copies of my papers, trying to bust soliloquy's at my talks (like at apa)...but when i invite you to join me on the stage or offer to come speak to you directly and you send such a nasty response...(yeh, i saw it)...

was reminded of a dream i had when i was out running this morning....you (SWAYLTW, trick, -the-tool) were all there...joined by 3 others of similar nature...and then joined by two other similar groups of 6 equally defiled souls. you were stranded on a small island, just big enough to hold the 3 groups of 6 defiled souls. the air around you was frozen so that you shivered and the tears that poured from each of you hung from your countenance like icicles. suddenly, 7 strikes of lightening...thunderbolts...rained down from the heavens. upon striking the ground between the 3 groups of 6 defiled souls, 7 mountains rose, each spewing an inferno equally as hellish as the 7 frozen winds that covered your naked bodies. the eruptions stirred the earth such that 7 earthquakes inspired 7 tsunamis that roared towards you. each of the 7 tsunamis uncovered 7 serpents in the sea like ancient mososaus that waited at the bottom of each inspired wave. suddenly you and the two other groups of 6 defiled souls like yours were all offered three wishes each of any proportion and accommodating to each imagination for a total of 54 prayers answered. each of you, 6 defiled souls in 3 groups with 54 wishes to be answered...surrounded by 7 thunderbolts, 7 infernos, 7 tsunamis, 7 serpents, with your nakedness facing the tundra wished for only one thing...that you never met the ONE...

I OWN THIS: A MADMAN’S MANIFESTO

Dear Trick,

As promised, I am responding to your email of Thursday, Nov 15, 2007. I am sorry for the delay, but travel, deadlines, the holidays, and several film crews in my lab over the last couple of weeks have kept me busy.

Communications
When I communicate, I communicate fully. There is meaning in every aspect of the communication… What time did I send the message? From what email account was it sent? Was there something significant about the date? Were there quotes, rhymes, strings of numbers? Did I use capital letters consistently? Were there written messages within the messages? etc… In turn, I view all of my incoming messages the same way… there is more to the communication than just the words… so, before I respond to your message directly, a few things to consider.

The crazy conundrum
I remember as I child, my father would watch me… hours memorizing the Latin names of all the beetles in South Carolina, organizing the heads from my decapitated PEZ dispenser collection, counting the cars on the trains that passed by my house and trying to develop an algorithm for predicting the number and frequency of freight cars, trying to cross species of grasshoppers, constructing genealogies and time lines of people in the Bible and cross-referencing the lineages with those from the Koran, raising thousands of tadpoles on the front porch under different temperature regimes to examine developmental rates and sex ratios… he would shake his head and say, “There’s a fine line between a genius and a fool”.

It does not matter what side of the line I walk, but rather how far over I have crossed. As I once told with-a-Y-like-the-wine, I accept the fact that I am crazy… proud of it even. But consider that crazy people think that they are normal and that everyone else is crazy. Again, I figure to maintain my sanity, it is best to acknowledge my insanity… but what kind of insane man is sane enough to recognize his own insanity? And if crazy people think they’re sane and that everybody else is crazy, but I acknowledge that I am crazy, does that make me sane and you crazy?… boy, there is a fine line… and consider this… would you rather get your *ss whooped (and you ARE getting your *ss whooped) by a fool or a genius?

The first thing to consider
Before I even open an email such as yours, I consider why you might be sending me an email at all. You see, at the time, it had been 1,778 days since you communicated anything to me (do you remember what you said?). This recent email was intriguing. I know for a fact you have all been warned about communicating anything to me… rumors that I record phone and personal conversations, that I have access to emails and conference calls…
rumors that I have contacts inside the company...even rumors that I have planted listening devices on some of you at meetings that have made it back to your office and homes...Not to worry, many crazy people are paranoid...I always say, the secret to a happy successful life of paranoia, is to keep careful track of your persecutors. Why do you think I know exactly what is on page 33 of 490 and pages 46-490 of Syngenta study T001508-03...how else would I know exactly what day the crayfish died in [redacted]’s son’s classroom... on May 14, 2002, were your ribs really broken or just bruised? ...and [redacted]J-the-Tool, what was the name you used when you talked about to [redacted] with-a-Y-like-the-wine on Dec 13, 2005, 2:12 EST...and what was that comment you made to SWAYLTV on March 15...something about slam-dunking a basketball?...and did [redacted] really cancel his cable service... or was he just being obnoxious?

As I was saying, before even opening the email, I wondered, “why would you contact me, after you had been warned?” My first thought was that you were defecting...tired of wondering if you are doing the right thing...all those conversations after work...with your family... about my emails and the work that’s coming out...but surely if you were defecting...you would not use the company email. My second thought was maybe you thought you caught me...that little slip-up that you’ve all been waiting for that will make me liable, make a bad headline...but I’m confident I didn’t slip...what could be so important that you would break 1778 days of silence?

The time
Then I looked at the time the email was sent. Was it a late night email?...that usually means its one of those emotional ones that you should have let sit...maybe one that slipped by after a second glass of scotch. Nope, 14:46:12, middle of the day. That means you thought it was important. Emotional...out of anger...nope, you thought it was clever. You not only left on all recipients, but you added [redacted]. That means you either thought your message had relevance to the review, or you just thought your “little buddy” would enjoy it. It also indicated that likely you were with him or had spent some time discussing my presentation the evening before...which I already knew anyway.

The message
And then, after all that thought, I read the message: [redacted] I am flattered. You tried to know me. You thought long and hard. You wanted to hurt. You thought... “what words will hurt him the most, what will really get to him?”... “Lost”...my pride for my prowess and intellect was your target. “entertaining fraud” ...surely words that will wound a man whose very soul stands on respect and integrity.

Sorry, Trick...My name is tyrone...and you still don’t know.

“You lost” (tyrone)
“Exactly what did I lose?” (tyrone)

“I’m not touching you”
Imagine...a five year old...holding his finger just millimeters away from an older sibling’s face, “I’m not touching you. I’m not touching you.” He whispers over and over again, until finally, the target of his taunting gives in... screaming at the top of lungs. On the most base level, that’s the game we play. “I’m not touching you...”...over and over again...until you give...and after 1778 days!...bonus points! Regardless of the content of your email, just by responding, YOU lose. “I’m not touching you...I’m not touching youuuuu.”

“You lost” (tyrone)
“Exactly what did I lose?” (tyrone)

Everyone at SETAC was calling you an entertaining fraud
“I walk up in there like I’m a resident Spend some time, bust my rhyme,
Even in-sult your president.” (tyrone)

IDGAF! Come on???????…do you think I care about propriety and professionalism? I do what I do, because it’s what I do…IDGAF!!! I look, my first SETAC, I rolled up 15 and 15!... autograph- signing, room-packing, rhyming-busting, *ss-whooipin... and toldem’ “please don’t ever invite me back”....I have used the “F- word” in my talks, have quoted DMX, Busta Rhymes, Tyra Banks, Marvin Gaye...I have jumped off stage, brandished emails...entitled my talks everything from “Opening up shop” (from DMX’s “Stop, drop, shuttem’ down, open up shop”) and “America’s Next Top Model”....I pack the room, havem’ call out security, was the stimulus for the “Hayes clause” at registration, and have been invited back every year. That’s my house, Trick! Do I care what you...and your ss kissin’ H’s think?
I’ve already been invited to the next one... guess people like being entertained.

“You lost”
“Exactly what did I lose?” (tyrone)

There is no denying this...
“hip hop don’t stop, and they couldn’t wait
For the sh*t I’m goin drop, in two thousand and eight” (tyrone)

The big news this year will be Darnell (Xenopus laevis) and his atrazine-treated brothers and sisters.... brothers with severely impaired fertility and sisters (genetic males) who lay eggs. The reporters have already gotten their piece, waiting for embargoes to drop. I just reviewed another frog paper and saw a preview of a paper showing complete sex reversal in fish with 2.1 ppb atrazine and microarrays showing upregulation of aromatase, p450scc, and StAR in scores of human endocrine cells...in case you don’t know, Trick, that’s bad news...the authors are linking atrazine to infertility, sexual abnormalities, immune impairment and implantation loss and abortion in humans. Once again, the ONLY people who find no effect of atrazine are those under Syngenta’s pay roll...and nothing you have done can touch the quality of my work. Even...the-tool has said “tyrone, that work is crap and you know it” referring to the Syngenta funded work. said something similar in England (speaking of crazy people, how’s he doing?)...and if these rumors are true, I would even have a digital recording of these statements. Nothing you have done has discredited my work and nothing you have done has received the attention that my work has. Me lose? I don’t think so... (see “There is no Denying this”, First letter of the first word, of the first sentence, of the first seven paragraphs). My work will stand the test of time...My publications, my funding, the fact that I give more than 60 invited talks per year all over the world...everything from Mayo Clinic, to United Steelworkers to History departments, to women’s health conferences, to Gordon conference on the mammary gland are all testimony to that!

“Exactly what did I lose?” (tyrone)

Honor thy father and thy mother
My father used to tell me as a child, “work hard in school so that you never have to answer to another man. Never put yourself in a position where another man tells you when to get up in the morning, when to eat your lunch, and when to go home to your family.”

And my boss??? There are only three people in this world who can tell me what to do. One of them died Christmas day 2005. When I asked the other two... “mama, daddy, what should I do?”...they replied, “son...whoop that *ss!...WHOOP that *ss!!! Whoop that *ss ‘til you’re tired of it!”

Who is your boss, Who’s your daddy?

“You lost”
“Exactly what did I lose?” (tyrone)
I brought the hood to Harvard
My father used to say, “I just pray to G*d that none of my boys ever go to prison and that at least one of my boys graduates high school.”

I have never seen the inside of a prison. I graduated high school in 1985. I was then accepted on full scholarship to Harvard (pronounced Hah-vahd)... considered the top university in the world. In my major, I finished summa cum laude. I then completed a doctorate in what is considered the second best university in biology in the world (Berkeley) in 3.5 years. I was then hired, and by age 30 became the youngest tenured professor in biology and by age 35 the youngest full professor... ever... in the history of the university. I honored my father (who never finished high school, whose father never went to high school). No matter what the outcome of our relationship and interaction, you will never be able to take that away from him... or me.

“You lost” (blank)
“Exactly what did I lose?” (tyrone)

“I believe the children are the future”
My father used to say, “the son should always be BETTER than the father.”
My father never had a father, but nevertheless, he had the insight and the drive to want and make a better life for me than what he had. I would never say that I am better than my father, but I know what he meant.

My children have attended the fancy “white private schools” that were not available to me. My son, now turning 15, is a lineman on the football team, plays two instruments on the high school marching band, jazz band, orchestra and the Berkeley Youth Orchestra, is a straight A student in the advanced honors program and still holds the district middle school record in shot put. My daughter, now 12, is also a straight A student, plays drums, piano, is the regional gymnastics champion and ranks in the state. As both are beautiful children, they are also quite popular... well-rounded. With their records and along with Harvard and Berkeley alums as parents, they will have their choice of colleges. While college campus was a completely foreign environment to me, they have grown up there... whereas my first flight ever was when I left South Carolina for Harvard, by age two my son had traveled in Japan, Thailand, China, Mexico, and both have traveled to Belize, Paris, London, Italy, Tunisia... I wouldn’t say that my children are better than me... that would be an insult to my father... but you know what I mean.

“You lost” (blank)
“Exactly what did I lose?” (tyrone)

Large and in charge
When I went to college, my father reported an annual income of $9,000 for a family of five. I get paid $10,000 for talking for an hour... $20,000 + expenses for walking around barefoot in Borneo... I look out of my west facing window from my 1.4 million dollar home... over my grapes, fruit trees... out over Oakland, Alameda, across the bay to San Francisco... I think about that big six bedroom, three bath, two-story “white-folk” house that I bought my parents, while eating lobster and caviar in my $150K newly renovated kitchen, sitting at my 12 person Chippendale table... and I think... “even if they could take it all away, I would lose nothing”... I will “leave this world the same way I came into it... with nothing.”

“You lost” (blank)
“Exactly what did I lose?” (tyrone)

Thuglife was the reason for this “Thuglife”... not the crap you read in the dictionary... is a philosophy defined by Tupac Shakur as a life where someone from nowhere makes something of themselves from nothing... makes something of themselves that he/she can be proud of, and always remembers where he/she came from. Thus, even a drug dealing gangbanger or pimp who remembers where he came from... follows the code and doesn’t exploit his own hood, doesn’t run kids, doesn’t sell to kids, or pimp from his own hood... is better than a doctor who moves out and never gives back.

Me?... I am nobody from nowhere... I took the hood to Harvard and brought Harvard back to the hood... do you know what the little ones say about me when I go back for Christmas... “We saw you on tv! We learned about you in school! You are in our textbook! We got your Starbuck’s cup! Can I be a scientist too!”

What you know ‘bout that, Trick? You don’t know...

Do you know how many of the students in my lab were from ’round the way?... (homeless, drug dealers, on drugs, single parents, family members of gangbangers, etc)... but found there way to me and have now graduated... gone on to grad school and med school? (you know at least two of them)? Do you know about that, Trick?... And in March, I will carry the ivory tower straight back to the hood... in the same way that ‘pac brought the east coast-west coast to the end... laid down the law (“Cleveland to LA”)... thuglove, N*GG*!!! (yeh you, Trick!)... thuglife.

“You lost”

“Exactly what did I lose?” (tyrone)

Stewards of the earth

“Accurate knowledge of Chr*st, the F*th*r will bring the everlasting, now” (TAPKAP).

Does not matter if I reject theism, subscribe to Christianity, Islam, Buddhism, Taoism... they all saw the way... I denied the comfort of a Syngenta contract (remember [redacted] you and [redacted]? and risked the wrath of Ecorisk, Syngenta, even some people at my University... risked my reputation, my name... some say even my life, for what I thought (and now know) was right... as [redacted] told me “you know you’re holding all the cards”... I could have gotten whatever I wanted out of Syngenta... I chose to say no... I chose integrity... and I won... Even if you could destroy me now, I would go down a martyr for the environment... my granddaughter’s daughter will honor me as I honor my grandmother... can you be so sure?... our conversations in the past and your continued discussions at home... the look on your face in Milwaukee... indicate that you are not so sure... I have never doubted my position. And for me... this is heaven. I tell my children, “do not do the right thing because you seek reward, and do not avoid the wrong thing because you fear punishment, but rather, do the right thing because it is the right thing.” I did the right thing. My granddaughter’s granddaughter will tell yours so... Trick!

“Exactly what did I lose?” (tyrone)

The name of the game... is persistence

"Despite the roadblocks and obstacles that I may face, I know that I will never fail... because to truly fail, one has to give up, and that is something that I will never do."

(tyrone, October 13, 1988, last line of personal statement from a successful graduate application to UC Berkeley).

I remember, like yesterday, playing kickball in my yard. The little kids (I was 9 at the time), played the big kids. We were losing, but not too badly, when most of my team decided it was getting late and they had to go home. Eventually, my whole team quit except me. I insisted we continue and managed to get the last out. At home plate, I managed to kick a homerun, but then on my second kick, got only to 2nd base. With no one to kick me home, I could only move off base and get tagged out to return to home. The older kids on the other team decided it was pointless and they too quit. I insisted that they stay eventually resorting to "if you forfeit, then you lose!" You might think that the result was they would never want to play with me again... just the opposite... but only if I would play on their team!

“I own this”, Trick. I can stop anytime I want to, for whatever reason. I am a tenured full professor with a lifetime endowment at one of the top two biology departments in the world. I don’t HAVE to do anything. If I quit I still have my position, my salary, my endowment and my freedom to do whatever I want. If you quit, however, you will leave the world to face the truth. You can’t quit! How much money do you spend campaigning against me, driving bogus science to buck me... how many conference calls, emails, meetings, how many? Because you have to... me... because I choose to... because I own this.

And maybe this is just fun for me... maybe it’s just a game. Maybe I just love the attention. Maybe your best defense is to ignore me and I will get bored and find somebody else to play with. Somebody else to annoy. But you can’t quit can you? Even though every time you acknowledge me, you bring the hype that brings a standing room only crowd. Maybe, the day before each talk and in the preceding hours, I tell stories of how Syngenta follows me around, taking notes and sending me threatening sounding messages, contacting my university, trying to get the names of people who review my papers (yeh, I saw the emails, Trick!)…maybe half the people I meet with are intrigued, the other half thinking… “man this brother really is crazy!” And then… I give my talk…and in the back, there is a man in a suit that nobody recognizes…taking notes like crazy, sometimes (like in Australia), he even introduces himself… legitimizing all the crazy paranoid stories that built up over the day…boy that really livens things up!

“You lost” (tyrone)

These tricks ain’t for kids
And of course, I put everything into a cultural context…I bring you to my world. Who is: (redacted)? Are you Pimpin’? Again, not the crap you read in the dictionary… “Pimp” is boss…ballin’, runnin’ the hood. Under him are the H*’s ( slang for wh*r*s)…in the strictest sense those selling their bodies…but generally anyone selling themselves, selling out. Though a derogatory term, at least H*’s have some command…they have something that somebody wants, that somebody will pay for. Then there are the “scrubs”…pimp wannabes riding on the pimp’s coat-tails…hoping to boss one day. At the bottom, there are the “tricks”…customer of the H*’s…nobodies (no real man has to pay for it)…ultimately supporting the pimps…even the scrubs have ambition and a path.

When we met, you were a scrub…remember you and peter? (I still have the emails and if the rumors are true…transcript of our conversation)…but you ain’t even scrub now…just a trick…a nobody... no path…counting on your (in this case…dumb) H*s, watching them present their purchased science… I saw it in your aging desperate face in Milwaukee…that’s why you cc’d (redacted) on your email…you wanted to impress the pimp, “trick-daddy”…that’s why you added eager— (redacted)…that’s what I saw in your face. Way back then, at least you were scrub, trying to do what’s right…trying to maintain your job…trying to scrub. Now, you’re just “Trick”…paying your H*’s hoping to keep your pimp happy.

And me?… I guess back then I was the equivalent of an academic scrub, trying to make tenure, trying to boss. I guess I temporarily was even a H*, trying to get paid, trying to satisfy…”He will come running” (redacted) to (redacted)… “How high?” right? But now? Trick, who’s ballin’, baby!

“You lost” (tyrone)
“Exactly what did I lose?” (tyrone)

It’s like foreplay
And finally…maybe it is nothing more than a simple game to me. Again…maybe, I just love the attention. Maybe you are stroking my ego even in your non-response…and maybe the silence is like foreplay…1778 days of foreplay…where in my confidence, I know that eventually…you will come…come to me.

1778 days you were gone…

Kahlil Gibran said, “If you love somebody, let them go, for if they return, they were always yours…”

1778 days…and you have returned…

Are you mine, (redacted)?

“I own this”…and I own you.

hey...it's me papa

just writing to let you know that our first talk after the new year is jan 9-10 at the md anderson cancer center in houston. i will be presenting my work alongside the comparative and cancer data and the focus on minority health. i am also excited that our new work on aromatase will be presented...this one's goan flip ya...show goan git ya.

if indeed you want equal time to speak, please let me know. i am an honored guest, so i am sure i can get you your own seminar time. if not, i will get you rebuttal time, or i will split my time with you. please, however, prepare yourself better. do not embarrass yourself or me the way you did in philadelphia. whatever respect i had for you in iowa went straight out the window. don't come with the old "i love syngenta" speech. come with data. and "come correct". don't know what you mean by "cherrie pickin" because i presented EVERY piece of yo! ur data, with experimental conditions and p values. only thing i did not present was your unpublished p < 0.005 data from michigan (which you said "that study is crap tyrone and you know it"...oops was my recorder on?). i don't know what larynx data you are talking about. the only "repeat" i know is [redacted]'s study where 52% of the animals died and the rest were shrinking with time (you can't expect secondary sex characters to develop in dying animals...besides, remember i saw the data before they were published. originally there was a significant effect (p < 0.05) and then everything changed between submission and publication (do you want me to send you the original ms? do you really want to discuss this in public?...remember, a brother is deep inside). anyway, let me know what you want to do.

and with-a-Y-like-the-wine...do you speak? i know everything that is written has your name on it...but you never seem to talk at the meetings...does syn! genta let you speak or are you only there as a "yes man" and side-arm accessory to [redacted]? let me know if you will be making handouts for me this time.

i know how you must feel...i do...i enjoy gardening. in a fairly small plot i grew ove! r 200 pounds of tomatoes last year. of course i don't use pesticides...so weeds do come up. by definition they decrease my productivity...if they didn't...they wouldn't be called weeds. i don't just pull them, i lay them down between the rows to prevent more weeds from coming up. then i compost them, so that instead of decreasing my productivity, they actually become their own enemy and eventually increase my productivity...it reminds me of syngenta...think about minnesota, purdue, apha...if you did nothing...if you ignored me...i would bring truth to the people...but when you acknowledge me, more people come...more people listen. you are the best publicity machine i have. we work well together. but it must frustrate you...

as for your ineptitude and inability to understand me, it puts you at a disadvantage...you see, i know many people like you...i have experienced you everyday of my life...i have learned to talk like you (better than you...by your own admission), write like you (again better)...i have conquered your schools, your organizations...your world...you however, don't know anyone li! ke me...you have yet to spend a day in my world (though i welcome you to bulawayo with open arms)...i...i will do my best to educate you.

i know how you must feel...i do...i enjoy gardening. in a fairly small plot i grew over 200 pounds of tomatoes last year. of course i don't use pesticides...so weeds do come up. by definition they decrease my productivity...if they didn't...they wouldn't be called weeds. i don't just pull them, i lay them down between the rows to prevent more weeds from coming up. then i compost them, so that instead of decreasing my productivity, they actually become their own enemy and eventually increase my productivity...it reminds me of syngenta...think about minnesota, purdue, apha...if you did nothing...if you ignored me...i would bring truth to the people...but when you acknowledge me, more people come...more people listen. you are the best publicity machine i have. we work well together. but it must frustrate you...

certainly, as i have said before, you are welcome to follow me anywhere you want. if you let me know ahead of time, i will split my time with you...i have told you this. i am on hiatus now, but you are welcome to come to my! mamas for christmas. in january-february, we have 12 university talks. in addition, there is one at the md anderson cancer center where i will present our new molecular data and the evidence for atrazine's targeting of minorities. similar data will be presented in my big talk in minnesota during my appearance for black history month (some think i'm a hero)...do you want to come?

as for your ineptitude and inability to understand me, it puts you at a disadvantage...you see, i know many people like you...i have experienced you everyday of my life...i have learned to talk like you (better than you...by your own admission), write like you (again better)...i have conquered your schools, your organizations...your world...you however, don't know anyone like me...you have yet to spend a day in my world (though i welcome you to bulawayo with open arms)...i...i will do my best to educate you.

Dear Dr. [REDACTED],

There's something you should know.
I'm a glutton...
insatiable
I always ask for more

So when you think it's over,
when I should be moving on
I'll be back for more, [REDACTED].

No [REDACTED].

So, how does it feel to get your *ss whooped in your own house...? by a guy in pigtails wearing Tibetan silver! who's house? looked like my house.
over 400 people...iine to get in backed up out the door of the convention center...my people, dressed in black, rollin 6n6...people...just like last year, asking for my autograph..."can you sign my national geographic please, and one for my advisor too please..."

don't know if you were there, but did you hear the laughter? you...that's who they were laughin at...did you hear the applause? me, that's who they were cheering...and syngenta, these clowns are who you are banking on in phase2? bring it. my advice is...the next time you buy a h, make sure you get someone who knows what they are doing.

the only good news for you ecorisk, is that this talk, my paper coming out in 2 weeks and a couple of papers, docs and press that will follow, will bring our relationship to a close. this is probably one of the last emails that you will receive from me as we close phase1 and move on to phase2.

welcome to the revolution.

“Thank you for everything you have done and everything you are.” “I can’t believe you came” she, my host in Tasmania, praised me repeatedly.
“But, I have brought you nothing that you don’t already have…taught you nothing you didn’t already know. The movement is already strong here.” I responded.

But even as I spoke, I recognized the power of the one…
The forester, deep in the Tasmanian landscape, watching his land destroyed by the plantations and the proposed pulp mill. “Down”, but no longer “willing”.
The townspeople, willing, but lacking the information…the “capability”.
The Australian Medical Association…capable, but not “down”.
“The one…down, willing, and capable…will bring harmony to the movement”.

“Sometimes, I too feel like it is time to give up”, my host confesses.

In my mind, I hear the book of Psalms, Job, Proverbs… but I dare not utter a word.
“You must have faith” I state… “that in the end, truth and goodness will prevail…and even if we do not change the world, we will be remembered as those who tried.”

And I think to myself, “He that overcometh, the same shall be clothed in white raiment; and I will not blot out his name out of the book of life, but I will confess his name before my F*th*r and before his angels.” (Revelation 3:5)

And I thought of you. I do not despise you or hate you. My heart is filled with love and sorrow for you and the fact that you have been misled…that likely we will sit on opposite ends of the table… Indeed, those who came and stood before H*m as the words were spoken… “All ye cometh and hear me. Follow the prophet”… but heard “profit” and did follow…those names too shall be blotted out…

I think of the words that my granddaughter’s granddaughter will speak of me and those that will be spoken of you…and I feel sorrow for you.

And to you…once again…your people sent a boy to handle what you should now know to be a man-sized job…as you can see from the attached, the movement is strong there. As you no doubt feel, the movement is global and rapidly growing. Soon you will see its true strength and power.

WHERE MY DAWGS AT?! ATRAZINE AND THE FALL OF MAN

Atrazine is a known endocrine disruptor. At low ecologically relevant levels, atrazine induces aromatase (the enzyme responsible for converting testosterone to estrogen) resulting in decreases in circulating testosterone and increased estrogens. This effect has been demonstrated directly in fish, reptiles, birds, and mammals, including human cells and tissues and most recently (in my laboratory) in amphibians. In male larval amphibians, exposure to atrazine results in both demasculinization (reduction in laryngeal size) and feminization (development of ovaries and testicular oocytes). These effects have been identified at metamorphosis, but to date, no studies have examined the long term consequences of developmental exposure to atrazine. We used an all-male line of African clawed frogs (Xenopus laevis) to examine effects of exposure to atrazine on reproductive function in adults exposed throughout development for two years. Ten percent of the exposed males showed complete sex reversal. These animals mated with other males and produced viable eggs. The remaining 90% appeared to be male. These “males”, however, suffered a decrease in fertility (20% compared to 80% for controls). Further, in the presence of control males, atrazine-treated males were incapable of attracting females for copulation. Control males had testosterone levels 100 times higher than atrazine-treated males when measured in the morning. When exposed to females, testosterone levels increased five fold in control males, whereas atrazine-treated males showed no significant change in testosterone levels in response to the presence of females. The low testosterone levels and absence of and endocrine response to females likely explain the low reproductive success and low fertility rates in atrazine-exposed males. The complete sex reversal of males in this study is consistent with two upcoming publications from independent laboratories showing complete conversion of males to females in amphibians and fish. The current data are also consistent with published findings in fish and rodents which show a decrease in testosterone and sperm number in atrazine-exposed animals and consistent with low sperm count and low fertility in men exposed to atrazine. Given atrazine’s widespread use and contamination, these findings continue to raise concern for the impact on environmental and public health.

and what you see as a conquest, only helps me see who will stay and who will go. all 7. if you thought this was ever just about atrazine, you were set to lose from the beginning. not to worry, we all make mistakes...even me...i used to call you "friend".

"Dr. Hayes,
At last year's SETAC meeting you not only inspired people's science, but also inspired their art. After your presentation, another speaker ended her talk with an original piece of science-themed slam poetry. On the national level, your work has the potential to inform and to change (and already has) the dialogue about pesticides and their impact on wildlife and humans. I was particularly interested in  you alluded to after your presentation.
Please consider sharing your work on  of atrazine exposure in SETAC's  Session in Tampa this year. I am  the session with . We hope you are available and will consider submitting an abstract. We have 6 speaker slots to fill in addition to a poster session."

You rock. That's why Blockbuster's offering you one month of Blockbuster Total Access. No Cost.
sorry, had to end my email abruptly yesterday... i was sending it from the airport and my plane was leaving... in fact, they had already unloaded my bags.

anyway, if you did not catch it, my point was that i no longer have to worry (not that i did much anyway) about my future... does this talk count towards my tenure? what is the impact factor of this journal? how many papers do i have to publish? if i say this will my dean or provost get pissed off? you see, my career is done. there are no more promotions... and i cannot get fired. i don't HAVE to do anything... for the rest of my life... (my life)... except what i want. you will not hear from me anymore, only from the people. having almost completed phase 1, i am now aware of what they want. they have many questions and i hope that we can answer them together.

i read an article on the plane yesterday written by two syngenta people. they were talking about gmo's and how they would solve the world's hunger problem. they claimed that manipulating genes is only "undoing" the reduction in genetic diversity caused by crop selection. what was more interesting was their claim that gmo's will make it possible to provide grains for the world's hunger, because there is not enough land to keep up with the needs of the world's growing populations. isn't that an interesting take when less than 2% of the world's corn is consumed as grain? you see... that is what i am talking about. i am a scientist... of course i am not opposed to science... whether it is gmos or pesticides... but do not use science to lie to the people.

i will keep you informed... by the way, my running partner from pittsburgh hits the wall at 45 minutes. still she enjoys running in the woods in bhnf better than the street in berkeley. i see "nf" in her journal much more these days. hope the two of you are also enjoying such things. the road runner on your mind and all.

Now.

we are about to witness a revolution...yes...this is not just about atrazine, or syngenta, or corn...or just phase2...this is much much bigger. much bigger than change...this is a revolution...and either i am a visionary or i'm crazy....personally, i'm going with crazy...paranoia, persecution complex. schizophrenia. delusions of grandeur, a napoleonic complex. a shaka complex (is there even such a thing?) ...

the way i figure it, who wants to think they're a visionary only to wake up one day and find out they were simply crazy? but hey, if you think you're crazy and find out one day, that no! you are a visionary...or maybe even both...now, that's something to look forward to...

furthermore...have you ever talked to a crazy person? they think that they're normal and that everyone else is crazy. i figure as long as i accept my insanity, then i'm ok!... it takes a sane man to recognize his own insanity.

that being said, at the start of a revolution, there are four people...leaders, followers, opposers. and bystanders. at the end, however, there are only two...winners and losers. it is not possible for you to hold the role of bystander and clearly you are not leaders.

unless you are a follower, you will lose...

as usual, i went back to the old neighborhood for christmas...and as usual, my old childhood friend came by to update me on who got killed. who's on crack, who went to jail, who got out, and now, who is a grandparent (who sucked his thumb all they way through highschool) is now the second of our old friends to make it on to the "america's most wanted" show. (my third grade girlfriend) is now a crack head. she brought his two younger sons to meet me this time. he tells me that he is doing better now. he is still living with his mother, but he has bought a used van and hopes that he will be able to use it to start a yard cleaning business and save up enough to rent the house across the street from my parents (where we actually lived when i started elementary school). he tells me that his older son (for whom i was named godfather, but have never met) did not graduate."yeh i told him, boy! you done did somethin i never did...stayed back!" and he laughs...somehow. i can't figure out where to work into the converstaion that that my 12 year old was invited to a highschool math conference or that just a few days prior i attended my daughter's reading of her poetry and short story."my dad the frog guy" she wrote about how i brought her pet frog from africa (i don't know the species that she [redacted] was named after."although i am not completely sure why, my dad is famous. i like to look for him in books, newspapers, and magazines and sometimes on tv." ...it made me proud.
my father comes out to join the conversation and pulls out his collection of this year's magazines and newspapers from the car to show me looks at the national geographic and back up at me and laughs...i look down at my sweat shirt (the same one i am wearing in the natgeo)..."hey, i hang on to sh*t, that's why i am still hanging out with your *ss". and i had been friends since we were five...the sweat shirt (now older than some of my students) was given to me for christmas by my mom after my first winter at harvard in 1985.

...says, "naw man...you remember ty...they used to say we weren't gonna be nothin. now look at you...and i mean, i ain't up in the mags like you and sh*t, but out of all these m f, who's still here to tell you who done f*cked up?" and you know...not to take the "holier than thou"...but he is right, he is the most successful of all of my friends who stayed in the old hood...and in many ways the most reliable. he left with his usual, "hey man, i'll be back new year's eve to take you and your brothers and your wife out." and i fretted for days trying to figure out how to tell him i didn't hang out like that anymore...of course by the time new year's rolled around, he was too drunk and too high to get by and once again, i didn't have to find my excuse. it was another good christmas.

it made me think...as usual. how did i get here? what is my purpose? i don't believe in divine intervention...always been a more of a "no fate but what we make" kind of guy--10 points if you know that reference...how fitting (and ironic) huhn?-- but, i do believe we all have a purpose. all this time, i thought mine was to give opportunities to students who had none...and instill in them that it was their obligation to pay me back by doing the same in their own careers. that's why we all have such a strong bond now you see?...in a little over ten years, we are everywhere...harvard, berkeley, ucsf, oxford, michigan, texas, ,  industry...and everything from lawyers, teachers, doctors, business...that's why i can make phone calls and pull people from graduate school, medical school, jobs in industry and have them come back to work in the lab (e.g. maggy, atif, and ali)...we have built a "nation", ready for revolution. i now know my purpose is to lead this revolution. to bring science and truth to the people...the people most affected by your lies and inability to inform them or make policy that will protect them.

so what will it take to stop me?...certainaly your "what to do about tyrone?" conference calls will not help you...(yep, i'm still on the inside...and i'm not talking about your feeble attempt this morning either...how do you think i new about it?)

by now, you know i can't be bought...

"and it ain't even about the dough it's about standing up for what you stand for yo!"
(Darkman X, X Gonna Give it to ya, Cradle to the Grave)

i can't be outsmarted.

and just for future reference...my father does not work at the university. i.e. talking to my provost, dean, chair won't get you sh*t but mo sh*t and you already in enough sh*t.

you know i can't be frightened...remember you used to warn me, "don't provoke them. don't you know they will destroy you??" and remember in your office in june 2003. i told you, "yes, of course i fear that they will destroy me. problem is, i don't fear destruction."

i am nobody from nowhere. what do i have to lose? my father used to say, "we will all leave this world the same way we came into it...with nothing." so, what is there to lose? i was a stillborn who has now stolen 13,689 days that weren't supposed to be mine. "that i saw the sun set on my first day, was more than i was promised"

i remember being very depressed when i became full professor. all this time i have spent jumping through one hoop after another. this job, this degree, that acceptance, this promotion...and now, no matter what i do, i will never be promoted again. but then, i also realized. i can never be fired. age 35, and my career was over, but my life...the one i gave up...could begin. "gave up" i thought...in these 13,689 days. i have been blessed with so much...my father never graduated high school and i have graduated from what have recently been named the two best universities in the world. my mother was born in the house that my grandmother was born in, that her father built on the land given to his mother when they were freed from slavery...and will probably die there...and i have been all over the world. i have run with children in the hills in uganda, i have been bitten by a python in the arabuko sokoke, i have eaten dim sum in guangzhou, fugi in hiroshima, boshintan in kwanju, kangaroo in adelaide, i have walked barefoot in the karakum on the border with iran and turkmenistan. i have hiked in the bwindi impenetrable forest and into the congo. i have run naked on the highway in montana. i have watched iguanas dive from the trees in belize. i have drank caprinha in rio, chardonnay in napa, grappa in venice, trappist ale in belgium, port in protugal, i have climbed on the pyramids at giza, been charged by baboons at victoria falls, gotten food poisoning in the caribbean, thailand, and burma. i have been chased by stray dogs through the parthenon and by prostitutes through the streets of athens. i have seen the iceman in bolsano, i have watched macaws in costa rica, i have seen the mona lisa, sailed on the nile, ridden a camel in cairo. i have walked through the mosque of suleyman the magnificent. i have stayed at one of idi amin's olympic training camps. been kicked out of the vatican for wearing shorts and upon looking for a bathroom next door found myself staring at the ceiling in the sistine chapel...and soon...i will have whooped up on the *ss of the largest chemical corporation in the world...i think you get the point..."if i leave before tomorrow, i will have already seen more than i ever thought i would."

so nothing will stop me ("hip hop don't stop")...maybe it will help to know what keeps me going. why do i continue?... "why does the roadrunner run on the road all day?"...but you are right, there is more than that.

i remember told that it was about name..."he's trying to make a name for himself"...i remember i responded, "i already have a name, it is tyrone."

i can't lie, this issue has changed my life, indeed. i have grown now to expect people to recognize me on airplanes, someone to ask a waiter to ask me to sign their napkin. someone to come up to me on the street..."aren't you that frog guy?"...daily. i just got an email from a mother who wondered if i ever came back to south carolina...her son was writing his black history paper "my hero is..." on me! i guess the most memorable was when i was called for jury duty last summer. as each potential juror's plea to be released was denied, i grew worried. i remember i stood up...didn't say a word. the judge just said, "yes, i know dr. hayes, you have to get back to your frogs. thank you for everything you do. my only request is that when i come to call on calday, you give me and my daughter a tour." it's all flattering, but not why.

my real motivation....

though i am very religious.
religious (adj): committed, dedicated. scrupulously and conscientiously faithful.

i am also a devout atheist.

atheist (noun): one who subscribes to a disbelief in G*d or any other deity.

as an atheist, i do not believe in heaven and h*ll as such. but i do believe in the afterlife, which can be manifested as heaven and h*ll...

how will i be remembered? each day as i watch the sunset...from my deck with a glass of chardonnay or from the hill at the peak of my run, i worship it as if it were my last. i ask (i guess some would use the word “pray”). “if this truly is my last, will i go happily”? i ask, what will my children tell their children about how their grandfather spent his last day? would it reflect how i tried to live my life? will i be remembered as someone who loved, who gave freely of himself? someone who worked to change the world in a positive way? will they remember me as someone who was true to himself and who brought truth to the people? will they smile remembering the time they spent with me in this world? will they say, to their children (as i say to mine). “when you grow up, try to be like your grandfather” you see?... THAT is heaven. anything else would be h*ll. anything else is unacceptable. THAT...THAT!... is heaven...and i am guilty. i am not selfless...i am ensuring my place in heaven. THAT is what drives me. and THAT is why...you will lose.

just about to board my plane right now for the "land down under" then lay over in illinois...some other locations? (B@!!! but 2$?...i don't  you know it!)...hmmm, "f*ck wh*t y hrd...it's what you hearin...LISTEN!!"

is it true? did you really change your name to "busta' bust down som'th'n"?
you lost. and everyone at norcal setac was calling you a boring fraud.

there are few things i despise more than tricks and BMNs. nevertheless, i’m a fair man. so...

some advice:

1. next time you want to come to MY house, wait for an invitation.
2. before you step foot in my house, wipe your feet at the MFin door!
3. tell your little lap dog to wear knee pads next time and wipe the  from his mouth before he steps up to the mic.

INTRO

Welcome to Phase2, welcome to the REVOLUTION, and welcome to Bulawayo... welcome to my world. undoubtly, you are frustrated and frightened... as i am clearly unlike any man that you have encountered, you will find this world...my world...confusing...

my father used to say, "if you ever turn a corner and find me trapped...
unarmed and surrounded by knife-wielding adversaries..make it a fair fight...if you have a gun...give them the gun." so, i am giving you the gun.

in the next three emails (inclusive), i will catch you up. if you want to be in this...you have got to know me...who am i? where am i going? what do i want? before you say or write anything....remember that i record and keep EVERYTHING...remember that anything you say can and will be used against you...

i realize that i am a complex man...and three emails seem like nothing...biographers and producers in this spend MINIMALLY two weeks shadowing and studying me...but we do not have that kind of time...the hour is approaching...so, i do the best i can...

IN THE BEGINNING... i was a stillborn. on july 28, 1967, doctors in the "colored hospital" in south carolina informed my father that i would be born dead... breach, with the umbilical chord wrapped around my neck... my 4'9", 76 pound mother would push for another 24 hours before the doctors would decide to deliver the dead baby by cesarian section for fear that my mother (like me) would die in the ordeal. on july 29, 1967, i was delivered. far from death.

it was at that moment (i believe) that i committed...i sacrificed my second chance at life...to fulfill my father's dream...to make something of my life... to repay him for the life that he gave for us. he (romero hayes) never really knew his father, and by age five, he would also lose his mother...oh no, she didn't die..she left him...on gregg st...gregg street bottom...homeless and without parents by age 5... who knows what moved him, but he fought for a life that he would never have. "i only pray to G*d that my children never have to see the inside of a jail cell"...that was his ambition for us (me and my two younger brothers). in his words, he "protected us from the street" and every night prayed that G*d would forgive him for what he had to do to ensure that we would never know that life. i don't know what that protection involved. i do know, however, that even now, he can walk anywhere, anytime...

i was deemed "gifted" and so i went to highschool away from my neighborhood. dreher high school...in the richest white neighborhood in town. as a result of "old-fashioned" bussing, the only other Blacks there were from the worst neighborhood around. initially, they didn't know who i was. i remember some of the Black kids used to pick on me...because i was smaller...because i was in "the white classes" and perhaps most of all because i had been "protected". they were all called by names like "Skydiver", "Big D", "Smoke"...i remember that one guy who they called "Nutsack Cateract" had it out for me. he was small enough that i could take him, though... but then his friend "Hard Rock" took revenge. it was my only real fight. my only memory...a small fist growing incredibly large...i actually saw stars! he hit me so hard that he knocked me out of my shoes and my belt popped off! the next day, there were rumors that my father was on campus. i don't know what ever happened... but noone ever bothered me again.

after high school, i went to harvard. it was the only school that i applied to...not out of confidence, but out of ignorance...i actually never even considered that i might not get in...again, not out of confidence, out of ignorance. i not only got in, i received a full scholarship and graduated summa cum laude in biology for my research on environmental influences on amphibian hormones and development. it was at harvard that i made my first Black friends (REAL friends anyway, except my childhood friend...ironic isn't it? but it was soon that i would learn that even among these friends i was still very different. they had all gone to prep school...their parents were harvard (or other ivy league graduates)...i would see them on tv over christmas with the pope and they would hang out over spring break with the cosby's...wow...was i out of my league!

after harvard, i applied to berkeley...a little smarter now, i applied to three schools (berkeley, uw seattle, and ut austin). i was not accepted at seattle, and my fiance (now my wife) informed me that she would never move to texas...so, i went to berkeley. 3.5 years and 10 papers later, i was dr. hayes. 6 months after completing my phd, i would get multiple job offers and ultimately accept a position at berkeley. couple of year later, i would be asked to come to my first ecorisk "weekend retreat"...

the day you tried to put me in my place...
or simply the day we met.

my comments to representative may below (crazy people keep everything!).
Dear Representative Karen May,

This letter along with its attachments are intended to clarify some of the fallacious claims made by Syngenta’s representative, during his February 23, 2010 testimony before the Health Committee of the Illinois State Legislature.

1. Dr. stated that I and my laboratory were not GLP certified, a designation that he claimed is the “gold standard” for scientific laboratories. I attach the GLP certificate issued to my laboratory in 1998 (signed by , then of the USDA; Attachment 1). This certification was paid for and overseen by Syngenta (Novartis at the time). Thus, Dr. was aware of our status, despite his false claims before your committee.

2. Dr. stated that Syngenta never received or had access to the raw data for experiments that I conducted while I operated under Novartis/Syngenta funding. Please see Attachments 2-3. The first consists of pages from Syngenta consultant ’s review of my original data. You will notice in attachment 2, that reports what he calls “significant errors” when comparing our handwritten data (as “raw” as you can get) and transcribed original data. You will also notice (bottom panel) that reanalyzed these data, including computations of standard deviations, and even conducted a Monte Carlo simulation of our data. Both of these analyses required access to the raw data, which claims Syngenta did not have. Further, Attachment 2 also shows copies of our raw data with ’s handwritten comments. Attachment 3 shows another copy of our raw data with notes from (Syngenta). This document (Attachment 3) was provided to me by an Ecorisk panel member whose identity I have to protect. Clearly was not being honest in his testimony.

3. Dr. implied that no one has had access to my data from subsequent experiments, and that I have not been amenable to others analyzing my data. Attachment 4 shows a letter from (Feb 25, 2002) of the Syngenta/Ecorisk panel. You will note that the first line of this letter reads, “We are writing in response to your recent multiple contacts in which you expressed a desire to share data and information from your studies examining the effects of atrazine on amphibians in the lab and field.” I left the Syngenta/Ecorisk panel in 2000 (as recognized in ’s letter), so here they reference my willingness to share data even though I was under no contract or other obligation to Syngenta. You will also note that our subsequent data were not published until October, 2002, so I was offering access to raw unanalyzed data long before they were published or even submitted for publication. I even mailed them all my slides! The FEDEX receipts are attached (Attachment 5). So, ’s claim that I do not open my laboratory and share data is again false and knowingly misleading.

4. Dr. claimed (with supporting information from Anne Lindsay, US EPA) that I did not provide raw data from my studies to the EPA. This statement is also a fabrication. In Attachment 6, you will see the US EPA’s official statement from , dated Sept 24, 2003. This letter was filed with the University of California. Note that the first line of the letter states, “Tyrone, Although you are not required to provide EPA with any information, you have been very cooperative and have shared both the raw data and standard operating procedures from your research. Additionally, you have spent a considerable amount of time helping the office of pesticide program to understand the significance of your data and you have provided insightful reviews of similar research efforts.” So...once again, [Redacted]’s statement is a fabrication.

5. In addition, I attach an email (Attachment 7) from [Redacted] (Syngenta Legal Counsel) accidentally sent to me and CC’d to a number of attorneys and PR/crisis management firms. Attachment 8 is a subsequent email string between [Redacted] [Redacted] and others forwarded to me by a person that I must keep anonymous. Both attachments 7 and 8 demonstrate the true intention of Syngenta’s testimony and presence and their deliberate intention of misleading your committee and the people of Illinois.

Again, as I stated in my testimony, on some level, these are moot points. This is not simply a “battle” between me and Syngenta. Nobody free of Syngenta’s money can repeat their findings of “no effect” of atrazine on amphibians, and even if there were “Syngenta-free” negative data on amphibians, they would still have to contend with the preponderance of evidence from fish, reptiles, birds, laboratory rodents, human cell lines, and human epidemiological studies showing that atrazine is an endocrine disruptor (including many studies from Ciba/Novartis/Syngenta’s own laboratories and the EPA). The main point here is that the evidence provided herein speaks to the lack of integrity and sincerity (especially attachments 7-8) of Syngenta. Further, the contradiction between US EPA [Redacted]’s statements (who was in charge of the amphibian-atrazine review at the time) and US EPA Anne Lindsay’s statement speak to the consistency and reliability (if not the integrity) of the previous administration’s EPA, which Syngenta has asked the people of Illinois to rely on.

Thank you for your time and attention,

Tyrone B. Hayes, PhD

The quake was the sudden, violent release of tension, accompanied by destruction of what man deems important, and resulting in a new alignment. Hopefully the next one will not include the first attributes.

Have you ever been in an earthquake? I was... just weeks after I moved to California. I remember it like yesterday.

I was in the kitchen. All of a sudden everything became very quiet. No dogs barking, no birds singing...even the wind seemed to stop... Still silence

The cats felt it first, they all screamed and ran about. Then there was a low-pitched rolling roar. Our apartment building shifted to one side and then became rigid. So rigid that it vibrated. This was followed by the shaking that you usually see on television and in the movies. I ran about trying to remember what I was supposed to do... get under the table? Stand in the doorway? Run outside? Grab valued breakables? It seems like minutes, but in fact it was only seconds. The shaking stopped.

Then the sound all came back. But different sounds. People yelling, car alarms bellowing, dogs howling.

The cats felt it first.

yall know how i do...right?
hello, it's me tyrone (my name).
here's a hypothetical question...
let's say that i did not get to the phone quick enough when you called me at home and my answering machine picked up. let's say that this also happened once at school as well. what luck, in case we cannot resolve all of this between our memories. let's say that i stored the tapes somewhere. would i have your permission to make public the contents of those conversations?
let me know.
